

INCREASING THE FLEXIBILITY OF EDUCATION SPACES

KwickScreens are used in the RCA to create one-to-one meeting areas, and zone off areas in large rooms that were previously just underutilized space. The canteen has been sectioned off to help with a queuing system, to divide different seating areas, and to close off the canteen when its not in use

THE PROBLEM

Education spaces often lack flexibility or ability to section off areas for events, open evenings, private consultations or for co-working areas.

THE SOLUTION

Using portable KwickScreens, places like Portsmouth Grammar School, can now quickly create private environments for their students and teacher led events. This allows teacher to be able to have private conversations during open evenings, and big open spaces such as canteens and assembly halls can be sectioned off to create classroom or private spaces. The material can also be changed for different uses, such as a roll-up white-board, soft felt acoustic for sound absorption, and a projection screen.

THE BENEFITS

- Quickly transform large open spaces into ad-hoc classrooms or private spaces
- Cost-effective
- Compact and easy to use
- Printable with branding/imagery
- Use of white-board material for flexible classrooms
